The Moonington Post

Newtonia, DIST. of MOONIA (January 20, 1069_{AG}) -- Presidents, monarchs and poor wretches who never gazed upon a Tiffany window paid tribute today to Newton Leroy “Newt” Ging-Rich, on the Millennial Anniversary of his transport to what he created as the 51st colony of the United States of China (dba, “USA!USA!”)

Born Newton Leroy McPherson June 17, 1943 (using the old JC calendar), Newt Ging-Rich ruled Moonia, with his third wife, Queen Callista Bling-Rich, beginning in 2013 (again, the old calendar.) He was appointed Governor-General by USA!USA! President Mitt O’Bomba, acting immediately after his own inauguration to fulfill Ging-Rich’s dream.

About that dream, the former Speaker spoke during the Florida Republican primary election in the Year 68_{AG} (2012, as Jesus would see it) borrowing the immortal words of former Miami HoneyMooner Jackie Gleason, “To the moon, Alice. To the moon!” (Alice apparently being Newt’s pet name for Callista, and the Florida primary apparently being one of the strange rituals used in selection of leaders a thousand years ago.)

Romney cared enough for his old opponent that he took him literally. In his first Executive Order, the new president authorized the immediate shuttling of Newt, Callista and their cat to...well...the moon!! (one-way tickets.)

Blessed with an excellent WiFi connection to Earth (thanks to Al Goreacle’s invention of the Internet) Newt and Callista stayed in touch with FaceBook, FreddieMac and FannieMae friends back home, bringing much-needed Tiffany class to the otherwise drab moonscape.
